What Will He Do?

We do not know what inscriptions may be borne on the banners in the Democratic tri umphal procession on Wednesday next; but really some clue to the policy of the victor, rions parly, or rather its leader, would be very acceptable to the policy of the victor, rions parly, or rather its leader, would be very acceptable to the public, now not a little excited in view of the consequences of the victory won. We have great confidence in Mr. Douglas' sagacity and contrage, as well as a sufficient knowledge of his reticeace when he is pleased to be silent or oracular. He may use the first in proclaiming his bastility to the Administration and the policy of its 'supporters; or he may display the latter, and leave his votes and the progress of events to demonstrate his fature course. It will at present be vain to prognosticate what chuze he will take. He is to-day not the master of the emercally failed real first in any time the has created; and his future associations and affiliations depend upon men and things not within his control. As far as the wishes and intention to the couple were concerned there was indeed no time to lose, for hardly had the words been spoken which bound the twain, than there came a heavy clin of feet upon the stairs. The newly made wife looked alarmed, her spouse anxious, and the Justice kinuself certainly wonder struck as an elderly man rushed into the room followed by two city detectives. The bride uttered a pretty little shrick, the husband struck an attitude and the father, who it seems had followed the runaways next haste, at once demanded that his daughter

While we sympathise heartly with our Wisconsin neighbors who have laid mortgages upon their farms, at the suggestion and for the benefit of ollity of establishing a line of sett swindling speculators and soulless corpora-tions, we conceive that they are looking in for is there a practicable route for a railroad settlements may be planted in the valley of the Kaministaquoia, around Lake of the Woods, and along Rainy Lake River; but the wrong direction for a ren are no part of the concern of the State, fur-ther than this: the State is bound to see that the mountainous and rocky barriers interven-ing place railroad connection entirely out of the question. Nature seems to have designed Lake Winnepeg as the no injustice is done within its jurisdiction; but there is no obligation resting upon it to come forward and relieve any man, or any come forward and relieve any man, or any number of men, of the consequences of his or their folly in swapping away farms for worth-less railroad stocks and bonds. The principle upon which application for relief will be made is one full of mischief—the fertile parent the south for the commerce of those 400,000 square miles of arable territory which lies between it and the Rocky Mountains. Here of all the absurd and unjust legislation to which the caprices and wants of men give rise. When shall we all learn that the lawgrees of faitude, by the Red River of the North, and thence across to the Mississippi and Lakes Superior and Michigan by rail, whence it will seek the best and most easily making power has duties, which, even for furthering the ends of justice, cannot be safely overstepped? Our Wisconsin neigh-bors are in a bad box; but nothing is too ab-

This is also Mr. Cobb's position, and a Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun thus states his argument.

We shall have for export this year, cotton to the amount of one hundred and sixty-five millions of dollars, deducting six hundred thousand toles for home consumption: Gold, breadstaffs, &c., will amount to some two bundred millions more. If our exports amount to three hundred and fifty millons, the imports will amount to the same sum, and if the duties average twenty per cent. they will give us a revenue of seventy millions.

It will be exceedingly fortunate for the will give us a revenue or seventy millions.

General Walker is here to seek a withdrawal of the President's Proclamation, or at least a modification of its terms. He has not yet had an interriew with the President, but will ask one-to-morrow. He hopes, through friends, to secure an saudience, and says he is all ready to leave for Nicaragoa. Should he fail to induce President Buchanns to withdraw or modify his Proclamation, he declares his intention to dispregard the same and sail immediately. The General dines to day with the Hou. A. The Treasury is now running upon the last ten millions of the forty-million loan authorized by the last Congress, which, with a deficiency in receipts of some half a million a week, will be exhausted before January. As to a revival of trade, that cannot be looked for before next spring at least. There will be three or four burd winter months during which Mr. Colb will have to fish desperately at the bottom of the strong-box unless Congress should come to his relief with another loan. The size of the loan will depend upon whether the expenditures are kept within the Secretary's estimate of seventy millions per annum, or run up to ble appointments in Illinois. At is now most stood that he will leave in six weeks whether the nomination be then acted on or not, provided it be not previously rejected.

The more enterprising of the Canadian mer-chants are now earnessly considering how they may best utilize the Northwest Perritory

The more enterprising of the Canadian merchants are now earnestly considering how they may best utilize the Northwest Territory, and as a commencement the Northwest Transportation Company has been formed. The first improvement to be effected is the general communication between Red River and Lake Superior, by facilitating the transit over the portages. If the company alumber over its duties, their claims are forfeited by the terms of the charter, so that no obstructive monopoly has been created, and others will be allowed to supersed those who have failed. This precaution shows that the Legislature are fully intent on opening the passage, and its completion can only be a work of time. The benefit to be derived from its execution is now fully appreciated. The Canadians are asking themselves, "Can we not have a West as valuable to us as Illinois has proved to have been to New York?" This agestion they answer in the affirmative, insisting that the Red River, the Swan, the Assimiotine, and the Saskatchewan have prairies on their banks as fertile as any on the Mississippi and Missouri. Moreover, their energies have been quickened by the spirited move of Sir Balwer Lytton in founding the colony of New Golumbia, the terminos on the Pacific of the grand railway which ought to commence at Haifax and run to Quebec, thence crossing over the whole British territory to Vancouver. This enterprise, at least that portion of its connecting Haifax and guebec, was mooted in Parliament by the present Duke of New Goling the circuitous route from England to Quebec, by the St. Lawrence and the dangerous coast of Cape Breton. Lord Grey also praised the plan, and Lord Durham remarked, that "if for great political objects it should erre become necessary or advisable to unite all the British provinces under one legislative government, then there will be found on this side of the Atlantic one powerful British Buist which, supported by the imperial power of the mother country, may bid debance to all the United States of America." Em.—In reply to your letter I have to observe that you must be perfectly conscious that the difficulty in the way of my engaging in a cheas match is one over which I have no control. You were distinctly apprised, in answer to the extraordinary proposal of your friends that I should leave my home, family and avocations, to proceed to New Orleans for the purpose of playing chees with you, "that a long and arduous contest, even in London, would be an undertaking too formidable for me to embark in, without ample opportunity for the recovery of my old strength in play, together with such arrangements as would prevent the sacrifice for professional engagements." Upon your unexpected arrival here, the same thing was repeated to you, and my acceptance of your challenge was entirely conditional on my being able to gain time for practible.

The separence, however, of some weeks, during which I have labored unceasingly, to the sacrous injury of my health, shows that not only is it impracticable for me to save time for that purpose, but that by no means thort of giving up a great work on which I am engaged, and ashipecting the publishers to the loss of thous and, and my safelf to an action for breach of contract, could I obtain time even for the match it self. Such a sacrifice is, of course, out of all question. A match at these or cricket may be a good thing in its way, but none but a madman would so far either forfeit his engagements and imperil his professional reputation. Under these circumstances, I waited only the termination of your late struggle to explain that, featered as I am at this moment, it is impossible for me to undertake any enterprise which would have the effect of withdrawing me from duties I am pledged to fulfill.

The result is not, perhaps, what either you or I desired, as it will occasion disappointment to many—but it is unavoidable, and the less to be regretied, since a contest where

"And dried the blood with his night-gown!" said I.

"With his night-gown," repeated Mr. Dark. "It was the first thing that lay haody, and he snatched it up. Wait a bit, though, the cream of the thing is to come. When he had done being his own barber, he couldn't for the life of him hit on a way of getting rid of the looses hair. The fire was out, and he had no matches, so he couldn't burn it. As for throwing it away, he didn't dare do that in the house, or about the house, for fear of its being found, and betraying what he had done. So he wrapt it all up in a paper, crams it into his pocket to be disposed of when he is at a safe distence from the Hall, takes his bag, gets out at the window, shuts it sofly after him, and makes for the road as tast as his long legs will carry him. There he walks on till a coach overtakes him; and so travelis back to London to find himself in a fresh scrape as soon as he gets there. An interesting situation, William, and hard traveling, from one end of France to the other had not agreed together in the case of Number Two. her mistress which it was ber niteress to gain. As matters had turned sout, however, ther was no reason to fear her, let her know a she might. The charge of theft, on which she was about to be tried, did not afford the she was accust to be tried, and not allore the sma-dow of an excuse, in law any more than in logic, for aluding to the crime which her master had committed. If she meant to talk about it she might do so at Botany Bay; but she would not have the slightest chance of being listened to previously in a court of

she would not have the singhtest chance of law.

"In short," said Mr. Dark, rising to take his leave, "check-mate for Marmizelle? She didn't manage the business of the robbery half as sharply as I should have expected. She certainly began well enough by ataying modestly at a lodgeling in the village to give her attendance at the examination, as it might be required. Nothing could look more innocent and respectable so far. But her biding the property between the mattresses of her bed—the very first place that any experienced man would think of looking in—was such an amazingly stupid thing to do, that I really can't account for it, unless her mind had more weiging on it than it was able to bear, which considering the heavy stake she played for, is likely'enough. Any how, her hands are tied now, and her tongue too, for the matter of that. Give my respects to your mistress, and tell her that her runaway huband and her lying maid will nevur either of them harm her again as long as they live. She has nothing to do now but to pluck up her spirits and live happy. Here's long life to her and to you, William, in the last glass of ale; and here's the same toast to myself in the bottom of the jug." With these words Mr. Dark pooketed ais large souff box, gave a last wink with his bright eye, and walked away, whistling, to meet the Loudoucoach. I who knew my poor mistress far better than he did—I, who had noticed, that very day, that the sad, duil, vacant look in her face never brightened when he Justice spoke I who knew my poor mistress in the chan he did—I, who had noticed, that very day, that the sad, duil, vacant look in her face never brightened when the Justice spoke the few welcome words which that her innocence was made clear, and that she was a free woman again—I, in short, who looked at her and her inture prospects with very different eyes from the eyes of a stranger felt mournful misgivings at my heart when I thought over Mr. Dark's parting tous after he had left me. Other people—her relation the lawyer, among them—thought she would get over the shock that had been inflieted on her, with time and care. I alone felt doubts about her recovery from the first. As soon as possible after the occurrence of the events that I have just been relating she was removed to London for change of seene and for the best medical advice. From London she was sent to the sen-side; and her next removal was to the country house on the estate in

A MARRIAGE TRAGEDY.
By WILKIE COLLINS.

Conclusion.

"Did?" said Mr. Dark. "Why he went to bed with the unpleasant conviction on his mind that your mistress had found him out, and with no comfost to speak of, except what he could find in gibb crandy-bottle. He couldr't sleep; and the more he tossed and tumbled the more certain he felt that his mind that there might be a reward offered for eartching him, and he determined to make that slight change in his personal appearance which puzzled the witnesses so much before the magistrate to day. So he opens his dressing case and crops his hair in time, and takes off his whiskers next. The fire was out, and he had to be show in cold water. What with that, and what with the fairry of bis mind, naturally enough he cut himself—" will conclude all that it is now necessary for the robbery, and was transported for seven years. She did not lily to serve out her time. After two years submission to punishment, she and another woman joined some guale convicts in an attempt to escape. The? succeeded in getting away, but perished fearfully in the interior of the country. The bodies were discovered by the help of the minters; and ectilized appearances were observed which led to horrible suspicions of cannibalism on the part of the men, who probably survived starvation longest. The circumstances are all detailed, I believe, in the Parliamentary Blue Books. But it is needless for my purpose to say more about them than I have said already. Mr. Meeke must not be forgotten, though the has cropped out of the latter part of my story. The truth is that the had not have in the pa me to say.

A Nut for the Next Southern Conclair Concention.

We gave our readers the other day of the quality of the Cotton-Plant. It prollide in schemes for alevery-perpet alavery-extension, and for the advant of the interests of the South gen Having freed its mind on the subject viving the African trade in black has it has turned its attention to the extensest of direct trade between the Southern Comment of direct trade between the Southern Comment of the several Southern Comment on the several Southern Comment on the several Southern Comments on the Bouth to sustain an independent stemmers running directly between any of its ports and Europe, the Cotton proposes a secondary connection with the
